Our Philosophy

Beginning with a dream in 2005, The Wright Way Farm was founded to share the good things that come out of sustainable, healthy, and cruelty-free living. Located near Beloit and Janesville, we are dedicated to promoting local and sustainable agriculture. All of our produce is grown using organic practices and is certified organic through MOSA.

Our goal is to provide a variety of healthy, delicious, and pesticide-free produce that is grown and delivered locally. We believe in a business model based upon three categories of sustainability practices, environmental, social, and economic. By utilizing environmental sustainability practices, we are farming lightly to leave resources for our grandchildren. By practicing social sustainability, we pay our employees fair, living wages and work with partners to facilitate access to healthy foods in communities where access is limited.

To ensure that our farm can continue providing healthy food by remaining in business, we responsibly take care of our economic bottom line.

What is a CSA?

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is a relationship between people and a local family farm. The relationship is based on the premise that farms need communities and that communities need farms.

Community members invest in farms in the spring when the farm cash flow is lowest. In return, farmers provide food throughout the season to those who invested in them. It is a symbiotic relationship that helps to maintain access to healthy food by providing economic support to farms when they need it most. In our CSA, a box of vegetables is delivered, weekly, to central drop-off locations for sixteen weeks.

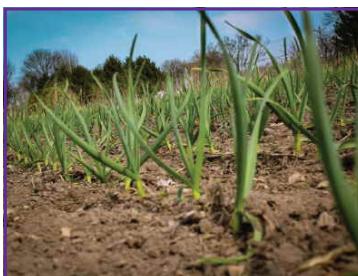

Share Details

Beginning in June and running into early October, you will receive a weekly box filled with seasonal produce that is freshly picked. Boxes are usually 1/2 to 3/4 full in the beginning and ending months, and they are overflowing in the heart of the summer. In addition, we will send you recipes so that you can enjoy your fresh vegetables in a variety of ways. These recipes are also on our website.

We have an Early Bird Special Price available for those who sign up before March 8th.

Fall Storage Share

Another option for members is our Fall Storage Share. This share consists of four to five large deliveries throughout the summer and October of storage items.

When you receive these shares, you will be able to can and freeze some items like tomatoes and green beans, while simply storing other items like potatoes, and flour. This will allow you to eat locally grown organic produce throughout the year.

Items we expect to deliver for storage shares include: black beans, whole wheat flour, cucumbers, winter squash, tomatoes, potatoes, green beans, cabbage, and other vegetables when they become available.

Some items may not be available every year due to growing conditions. These items will be delivered in larger quantities and will need to be processed shortly after delivery.
